Your Personalized Obsession Trigger Plan Based on your answers, here's your personalized relationship advice:

Understanding His Behavior in Your Dating Relationship The Commitment issues you're experiencing with behavior like "He's hot and cold with me. One day he seems really interested, texting me all day, and the next day he barely responds." are actually quite common. This pattern often indicates he's experiencing internal conflict - he's interested, but something is holding him back.

How to Respond Effectively Since you tend to communicate emotional, try these strategies for your goal of attention:

1. Create Space: When he pulls away, resist the urge to chase him. This often creates the "rubber band effect" where he'll naturally come back stronger.

2. Focus on Your Value: Continue developing your own interests and social life. Men are naturally attracted to women who have their own fulfilling lives.

3. Use the Hero Instinct: Activate his natural desire to feel needed and appreciated. When you make him feel like a hero (without being needy), he'll work harder to maintain your connection.

4. Communicate Clearly: Express your needs calmly without accusation. For example: "I enjoy our time together and would like more consistency. What are your thoughts?"

Next Steps Apply these techniques for the next 2-3 weeks, and you'll likely notice a shift in his behavior pattern.

Remember that a man who truly values you will work to keep you in his life. Remember: You deserve someone who recognizes your worth consistently, not just when it's convenient for them.
